

other and the curved regions of respective fibers differing in radii of curvature to provide a series of monotonically differing path lengths; and an optical switch for switching at least one optical input signal among the fibers of the plurality.